

Dear Gabrielle,

It's hard to know where to begin because we have continually expressed our love and emotions for each other since our first kiss. There is not much I can write to you that I have not already said.

I have been fortunate to have a great family, that has loved and supported me through all of the ups and downs of life. However, before I met you my life was a series of milestones that were, or needed to be, checked off. My life was a resume of accomplishments and I was always looking for the next thing to do. Life was full, but somehow empty at the same time. There was always something missing, and as I found out in the Fall of 2013 you were what was missing from my life.

I have known since the inception of our relationship that you are my one and only true love and soulmate. We are so fortunate and blessed to have finally found each other.

In you I have everything I could ever want in a best friend, lover and wife. I admire and respect your character, morals, and intellect. I am captivated by your beauty, elegance and class, and enjoy every aspect of your personality, especially your little quirks. You have an amazing ability to make the stresses and pressures of life melt away, and replace them with a warm overpowering happiness. The most routine and ordinary day with you is better than any other day just because we are together.

I cannot promise you how life will turnout, as you know, no good attorney ever guarantees an outcome, but there are promises I can make. I promise to love you more tomorrow than I do today. I promise to support you when you need help, comfort you when you are hurt and make you smile when you are sad. I promise to never stop working to be the best man I can be, because that is who you deserve. I promise to never forget the most important thing you have shown me, which is that success and happiness aren't quantified in professional and financial accomplishments, but in the quality of our life together and the health and happiness of our family. That being said I promise to use all my abilities and work ethic to provide you with the best life possible.

In the words of a great New York Yankee "Today I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth". Our life together started long before today, well not that long, but it stopped being my life and started being "our" life soon after we first kissed. Today we pronounce our love and commitment to our friends, family and the world, but I'm more excited for tomorrow and the next day. I'm excited to continue this journey we have started together, to continue to build our life, love and family. It took a long time to find you, but now that we have each other I'm never letting you go. I love you now and forever. Thank you for marrying me.

Love,

Brent
